3. Delegation

1. Matt Deline - County of Lambton - Michigan Avenue update

Matt discussed plans the realignment of the entrance to Waterfront Park. The County has proposed to go with Option 4, Figure 5 being the "realignment concept concept". Matt is working with Joe Dedecker regarding an area of encroachment on the Bluewater Bridge Authority property. The expected time frame for this road work to be completed is within 5 years. The Operations Manager informed the Committee that this option seems to be the most suitable for the Village of Point Edward.

More discussion took place regarding Michigan Avenue proposed road diet and road calming planning. Matt will investigate what requirements are needed at bus stops for parking restrictions and line painting. Timing for line painting will need to be coordinated between the County of Lambton, and the Village of Point Edward to work together to plan measurements.

A By-law will need to be created to make proposed changes once approved by Council. The Operations Manager is to check specifics of a 15 metre setback in the County By-law.

A public meeting will be facilitated to discuss proposed changes, and provide answers to inquiries. Proposed meeting dates are June 4th or June 11th for 7:00 pm, and will be confirmed with Council.

Matt informed the Committee that there are only 2 four way stops in the entire county, on County roads, as they feel that they are not very successful in mitigating traffic concerns. The County does have planned traffic movement counts scheduled so that intersection concerns can be monitored adequately.

A question arose that questioned if a traffic calming plan would aid the day care concerns, and it was suggested that the new parking lanes would be a change for the better, and to see if it reduces the risks identified.

Bump out curbs were discussed briefly as they are being used in the City of Sarnia on a trial basis. Thoughts are that the Village could possibly use them on a trial basis as well if needed.

Matt is working with Bluewater Power regarding Front and Michigan Avenue to review what will be needed for timers for crosswalks when work takes place along Michigan Avenue.

Recommendation 1

THAT a public meeting be held to discuss line painting for road calming, and the option for realignment of the entrance to Waterfront Park.

4. Curb Cut Policy

Idea is that office staff would find it easier to have a set curb cut process. The policy will need to identify in it that it could take up to a month for the whole process to take place.

The Operations Manager is considering a curb cut minimum of $125.00 per metre to cover costs, and that the work will need to operate within the zoning by-law requirements. If the curb cut request does not meet requirements then a minor variance must be requested.

The Operations Manager will prepare a policy and then bring to committee for approval.

5. Monk Street Park update

Proposed changes were discussed and reviewed visually.

6. Farmers Market Update

Recommendation 6

THAT the update regarding the Farmers Market be received and filed.

Carried

7. Overnight Parking Restrictions

Recommendation 7

THAT the existing overnight parking restrictions memo be refered to the Council meeting of May 28, 2019.

Carried

8. Recycling information plan update

To have ready for June an individual notice to discuss recycling and compost materials. It was also discussed that a small coloured reminder notice be inserted with the water bills that identifies the date and a short description of the changes to come. Notice will be advertised on the Village's website, Facebook, and Twitter.

9. Point Edward Early Learning Centre Request

Recommendation 8

THAT the Operations Manager work with the PEELC operators to help plan their 50th Anniversary Celebrations in our park.

Carried

10. Surveillance Camera Policy

Strict access was discussed at the arena office location, and Paul mentioned that he will discuss with staff the importance of keeping the door locked at all times to avoid unauthorized individuals viewing the surveillance.

Recommendation 9

THAT the Surveillance Camera Policy be approved, and the CAO prepare a by-law.

Hi Jim,

The attached photos were sent to me today of the storage shed at P.W. that is supposed to be accessible for the WPCP employees.

Kim was trying to do inventory today and the task was a health and safety risk.

The water inventory was not clear and accessible.

Dangerous, heavy equipment is blocking the storage shelves.

The issue of shared storage has been brought forward multiple times in the past. Until such time as alternative storage is available this area is to remain accessible, clear and safe at all times.

Can you please put forward a request to P.W. to correct this safety issue?

Thank-you,

We now have to look into spending some time and money on labelling the electrical panels in the facility. The last contractor in to do the renovations did not organize and label the panels properly and this needs to be addressed. I will be looking into this right away as it really is difficult to isolate circuits, and we struggle every time we need to do something in this regard.

Remote WI-FI access points (repeaters) are being added to several spots in the facility. Keystone was in to do this and will be returning soon with the new hardware.

Anything else you need or see around the Arena, please feel free to talk to me anytime.

Mayor Bev Hand Village of Point Edward 135 Kendall Street. Point Edward, ON N7V 4G6

Dear Mayor Bev Hand:

RE: Harmful impact of Indigenous-themed sports logos in city facilities

We are writing to urge all municipalities in Ontario to engage Indigenous communities about the use of Indigenous-themed logos and team names in their sports arenas.

The Ontario Human Rights Commission (OHRC) recently intervened in an Application before the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario (HRTO) which alleged that the use and display of Indigenous-themed logos and team names in the City of Mississauga sports arenas was discriminatory.

The OHRC conducted extensive outreach with Indigenous peoples to learn more about the impact of this use, and heard directly from youth across the province through the Indigenous Youth Council of the Ontario Federation of Friendship Centres. We intervened in the case to amplify the perspectives and voices of Indigenous youth and to highlight the harmful impact of stereotypes on youth.

The OHRC reached a settlement with the City of Mississauga and the Applicant. In the settlement, the City of Mississauga committed to:

- Remove from its sports facilities all Indigenous-themed mascots, symbols, names and imagery related to non-Indigenous sports organizations.
- Develop a policy on the use of Indigenous images and themes at its sports facilities, in collaboration with different groups such as the Mississaugas of the New Credit First Nation, the Peel Aboriginal Network, the Indigenous Youth Council of the Ontario Federation of Friendship Centres and Indigenous Sport and Wellness Ontario.

3. Supplement its Diversity and Inclusion training with expanded material addressing reconciliation and Indigenous peoples.

The OHRC is now contacting municipalities in Ontario to ask that they follow suit. This is in keeping with the OHRC's mandate to identify, prevent, and eliminate discrimination, and to promote human rights within the province using a range of powers under the Human Rights Code.

Harmful Impact of Stereotypes on Indigenous Youth

Sports are drivers of social inclusion; they bring communities together and help youth develop their self-esteem. We recognize that municipalities are committed to providing environments that promote healthy and active lifestyles in the most inclusive manner. To this end, the OHRC and municipalities have a shared goal of actively removing barriers to participation in sports for Indigenous youth.

The OHRC recognizes that the use of Indigenous-themed names and logos by sports teams has been a long-standing norm in our society. However, it is time to revisit these pervasive images.

One of the purposes of Ontario's Human Rights Code (Code) is the "creation of a climate of understanding and mutual respect for dignity and worth of each person so that each person feels a part of the community." As service providers, municipalities have obligations under the Code to provide a service environment free of discrimination. Human rights law has found that images and words that degrade people because of their ancestry, race, color and ethnic origin, among other grounds, violate the Code.

Derogatory images and words can have a significant impact on the ability of affected individuals and groups to participate and benefit equally in services such as participating as a member of a sports team or attending games as a spectator. There can also be broader social and psychological impacts on such individuals and groups, including how they are viewed and treated in their community.

The American Psychological Association is among over 100 professional organizations that have adopted formal resolutions recommending the immediate retirement of Indigenous-themed names and logos by schools, colleges, universities, athletic teams and organizations. These resolutions are based on a growing body of empirical evidence that demonstrate the harmful effects of these images. The scientific literature shows that Indigenous-themed names and logos:

- 1. Misuse cultural practices and sacred spiritual symbols;
- 2. Deny Indigenous peoples control over social definitions of themselves;
- 3. Perpetuate stereotypes of Indigenous people;
- 4. Create hostile environments for students and others:
- 5. Negatively impact the psychological functioning of Indigenous people (decreased self-esteem and community worth).

This research is summarized in Appendix A, the expert report of Dr. Jesse A. Steinfeldt, a sports psychologist.

In 2015, the Honourable Murray Sinclair and Chair of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) noted the profound impact that stereotypes in sports have on young Indigenous people.

The TRC Final Report documents the challenges Indigenous youth face in forming their identities and the important role of sports in developing self-esteem. One of the TRC's Calls to Action includes a call to ensure that sport policies and programs are inclusive of Indigenous peoples.

Additionally, the TRC calls for Indigenous peoples' right to self-determination to be integrated into civic institutions in a manner consistent with the principles norms and standards of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. The Indigenous Youth Council of The Ontario Federation of Friendship Centres has stated: "For too long Indigenous peoples have been branded by communities other than our own... We are the ones who can best create images of identity for our people". Indigenous communities must have ownership over their own images.

Next Steps

In our strategic plan, the OHRC committed to using our mandate and powers to engage in sustained trusting relationships with Indigenous communities that are built on dignity and respect, and by working to advance reconciliation and substantive equality.

The OHRC urges the Village of Point Edward to take the first step in removing barriers to participation for Indigenous peoples by collaborating with diverse Indigenous communities to develop a policy on the use of Indigenous-themed logos and names in their sports facilities and arenas. We have copied the Sarnia-Lambton Native Friendship Centre.

We have identified the following non-Indigenous sports organizations that use Indigenous-themed names and/or logos: Point Edward Blackhawks.

We believe that the City of Mississauga is taking important steps to show leadership and a commitment to reconciliation. The above-noted settlement sets a positive path forward for other municipalities to follow.

In keeping with the OHRC's commitment to public accountability and its duties in serving the people of Ontario, this letter and the response received may be made public.

Thank you for considering this matter.

Sincerely,

Renu Mandhane, B.A., J.D., LL.M.

Introduction

The use of Indigenous culture and images by sports teams is a practice that has a longstanding history and tradition in our society. The omnipresence of these Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos (e.g., Indians, Redskins, Fighting Sioux) gives members of mainstream society the (mis)perception that this is an acceptable practice that honors and respects the Indigenous communities that are depicted. However, there is emerging evidence indicating that this is not the case. Because of this misperception, it is important to include scientific peer-reviewed research in order to provide empirical insight into this issue. An empirically informed perspective can help people have a productive and civil dialogue about a practice that is hegemonically woven into the fabric of our society, yet has the potential to negatively impact the psychological functioning of Indigenous people.

To provide context to this report, it is necessary to report that I have a dual professional identity as a psychologist and as an associate professor of Counseling Psychology at Indiana University. In addition to having experience providing psychological services to Indigenous communities, I have conducted empirical research that has been published in peer-reviewed scientific journals that addresses the psychological implications of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos. My research productivity in this area, combined with my clinical experiences and my knowledge of the psychological literature, allows me to provide informed perspectives on this issue. Furthermore, I am in a unique position to testify about how this practice impacts the psychological functioning of Indigenous people, as a biracial man of Oneida heritage. I am tribally recognized as Descendent status, and my father is an enrolled Tribal Member of the sovereign Oneida Nation of Wisconsin. My clinical work with Indigenous populations was conducted at the Oneida Behavioral Health Center on the Oneida Reservation in Wisconsin. As such, I have heard first-hand accounts of the impact that these stereotypic images can have on the psychological functioning of Indigenous patients in a mental health setting. This dynamic compounds an existing problem because Indigenous communities are disproportionately impacted by serious mental health issues (e.g., depression, anxiety, substance abuse, suicide). Subsequently, a racially hostile environment wherein Indigenous people are readily stereotyped can contribute to the onset and entrenchment of these mental health issues. In addition to the misinformation and stereotypes produced by Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos, "an increase in accurate information about Native Americans is viewed as necessary for the achievement of other goals such as poverty reduction, educational advancements, and securing treaty rights" (King, Staurowsky, Baca, Davis, & Pewewardy, 2002, p. 392).

In 2005, my primary professional organization, the American Psychological Association (APA), produced a formal resolution recommending the immediate retirement of Indigenous-themed mascots, symbols, images and personalities by schools, colleges, universities, athletic teams, and organizations (APA, 2005). To date, over a hundred additional professional organizations (e.g., American Counseling Association, Society of Indian Psychologists, United States Commission on Civil Rights) have produced similar resolutions condemning this practice. These professional organizations—which represent groups that speak on behalf of large volumes of people and professionals—have based their resolutions on the categorical assertions that, among other reasons, Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos:

- (a) misuse cultural practices and sacred spiritual symbols;
- (b) deny Indigenous people control over societal definitions of themselves;
- (c) perpetuate stereotypes of Indigenous people (e.g., the noble savage; the bloodthirsty savage; a historic race that only exists in past-tense status; one singular pan-Indian culture);
  - (d) activate/create a racially hostile environment for students and others;
  - (e) negatively impact the psychological functioning of Indigenous people.

These categorical assertions are situated within an emerging body of scientific research that has empirically demonstrated the existence of stereotyping and harassment that accompanies Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos. Much has been written about this issue from a conceptual perspective across a variety of interdisciplinary fields (e.g., sociology of sport, indigenous philosophy, law, anthropology; Baca, 2004; Fenalon, 1999; King et al., 2002; King, 2004; Russel, 2003; Staurowsky, 2007; Vanderford, 1996; Williams, 2007), which provide valuable insight and context into the deleterious nature of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos. While I will include aspects of these conceptual pieces in my report, I will focus the attention primarily upon empirical research that has appeared in peer-reviewed scientific journals. Doing so can increase the validity of the emerging understanding of the negative psychological impact of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos in order to further demonstrate the applicability of these psychological research findings in the United States and in Canada.

As I begin this report, it is also important to clarify terminology. The terms mascots, nicknames, and logos are often used interchangeably to describe the Indigenous-themed images used by sports teams. These terms generally describe a similar dynamic, but there are subtle differences. While the term mascot more specifically refers to a costumed character that parades along the sideline or in the audience (e.g., University of Illinois now retired mascot, Chief Illiniwik), the term mascot has been generally used as the default term for Indigenous-themed images used in sport, and the term mascot is often attached to a logo (i.e., mascot logo) or a nickname (i.e., mascot nickname). The term logo generally refers to the image of a team that appears on uniforms, walls, programs and other places (e.g., see Figure 1 for examples of mascot logos in Mississauga; see Figure 2 for examples of mascot logos that were used in scientific studies cited in this report), and the term nicknames refers to the verbal terms used to identify teams (e.g., Redskins, Indians, Warriors; e.g., see Figure 1 for examples of mascot nicknames in Mississauga; see Figure 2 for examples of mascot nicknames that were used in scientific studies cited in this report). While much of the research has indicated that overall, the use of Indigenousthemed images in sport impacts the psychological functioning of Indigenous people, in this report, I will attempt to provide the reader with clarity by using the definitions outlined above in regard to which type of term was used in each study, largely based on stimuli images (i.e., mascot logo) or stimuli words (i.e., mascot nickname) that were evaluated in the study.

Misusing Cultural Practices and Sacred Spiritual Symbols; Denying Indigenous People Control over Social Representations of Themselves

Popular culture is inundated with stereotypic representations that appropriate Indigenous culture. One need not look further than the aisles of a grocery store (e.g., Land o' Lakes Butter), the local YMCA (e.g., Y-Princess camps), Halloween costumes (e.g., Indian warriors), cars on the street (e.g., Jeep Cherokee), the floor under one's feet (e.g., Mohawk carpet), or on television, to see the highlights of the Washington Redskins or Cleveland Indians games. This use of cultural and spiritual iconography is largely done without compensation to or consent from Indigenous communities (Merskin, 2001). To this point, the eagle feather is a considered a sacred spiritual item to many Indigenous people, so its presence on a football helmet is out of place and potentially problematic. According to Steinfeldt and Steinfeldt (2012), this practice would be analogous to having rosary beads or a crucifix used in a sporting context (e.g., a mascot named Father Guido dancing and genuflecting on the sidelines of a football game for a team named the East High School Catholics), something that Christians would likely protest and advocate for its removal because using these sacred images in this manner would constitute appropriating and misusing sacred spiritual iconography.

The misuse of these images not only prevent Indigenous people from having effective control over how they are societally portrayed, but these omnipresent images also perpetuate misinformation and stereotypes about Indigenous people, particularly because there is an imbalance of presentation of images. That is, for many people, sports mascots and other comparable stereotypic representations of Indigenous people are often the only images they have of Indigenous people. Empirical research (e.g., Fryberg et al., 2008) suggests that Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos have a negative psychological impact not only because they are inherently stereotypic in nature, but also because there are relatively few alternative characterizations of Indigenous people in the contexts in which these images appear. As such, these mascots, nicknames, and logos become powerful communicators of what Indigenous people should look like and how they should behave. And concurrently, these stereotypic images remind Indigenous people of the limited way in which others see them, which in turn has the internalizing impact of limiting the number of ways in which Indigenous people can see themselves (Fryberg et al., 2008).

In an empirical research study examining implicit attitudes on this subject, Chaney, Burke and Burkley (2011) assessed whether people could differentiate between Indigenousthemed mascot nicknames and actual Indigenous people. Using the Implicit Attitudes Test (IAT) to control for social desirability and to assess implicit beliefs that people hold toward subjects, results demonstrated that participants not only held implicitly negative biases against Indigenous-themed mascots, but study participants also perceived Indigenous-themed mascot nicknames to be effectively interchangeable with Indigenous people. This result indicates that stereotypic images of Indigenous people in society may serve as de facto sources of information about how Indigenous people should look and act. This is potentially problematic given the presence of the caricatured image of the Cleveland Indian's Chief Wahoo (i.e., big nosed, red faced, caricatured stereotypic image), when watching the half time dance of the University of Illinois' former mascot, Chief Illiniwik (i.e., perpetuating the stereotype of the noble savage), or when listening to sport broadcasts (i.e., "the Indians are on the warpath"). When combined with the limited number of accurate portrayals of Indigenous people in popular culture, the results of this study indicate that not only do people have an implicitly negative view of Indigenousthemed mascot nicknames, but people may also have difficulties differentiating mascot nicknames from real Indigenous people, subsequently transferring these negative views toward mascot nicknames into negative biases toward real Indigenous people.

Perpetuating Stereotypes: Stereotype Activation and Stereotype Application

In addition to empirical evidence illustrating negative implicit beliefs that equate Indigenous mascots with Indigenous people, emerging scientific research has attempted to address the nature of the stereotype-generating process that Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos can elicit. These studies have examined both stereotype activation (i.e., how accessible the stereotype is in a person's mind) and stereotype application (i.e., extent to which the person uses the stereotype to judge a member of a stereotyped group). Stereotype activation is considered an automatic cognitive process that is implicitly activated, whereas stereotype application is considered a more controllable cognitive process that involves people making judgments about an individual member of a stereotyped group. When a group of people is actively stereotyped, their psychological functioning is negatively impacted.

In assessing stereotype activation, Kim-Prieto, Goldstein, Okazaki, and Kirschner (2010) conducted two experimental studies to determine if stereotypes about Indigenous people that were potentially elicited by Indigenous-themed sport mascot logos would be extended to other marginalized groups, even if the other group was not directly targeted by the stereotypic representation. The authors used an Indigenous-themed mascot logo (e.g. Indigenous person portrayed as a bloodthirsty savage warrior) as a primer to determine if these images increased stereotyping of another racial group (e.g., Asian Americans as socially inept). Results indicated that participants who were exposed to the Indigenous-themed mascot logo (see Figure 2) endorsed significantly more stereotypes of Asian Americans than the control group. The results were consistent across two conditions—one condition used an unobtrusive prime, and the other condition used a more engaged exposure. In both conditions, simply seeing an Indigenousthemed mascot logo appeared to activate a stereotype-generating process about Asian-Americans among participants. These results suggest that exposure to stereotypic representations (i.e., an Indigenous-themed mascot logo) can increase the likelihood that people will endorse stereotypes of other groups, even when the stereotypes are different. Kim-Prieto et al. (2010) concluded that the use of American Indian images in sports serves to activate a stereotype-generating process within people, creating a racially hostile environment for all parties who are exposed to stereotype-inducing Indigenous-themed sport mascot logos.

Burkley, Burkley, Andronde, and Bell (2016) conducted a research study to assess dynamics related to stereotype application as it relates to exposure to Indigenous-themed sports mascot logos. The researchers found that the effect of exposure to an Indigenous-themed mascot logo existed, and that this effect was also moderated by participants' attitudes toward Indigenous people. That is, participants with more prejudicial attitudes toward Indigenous people were significantly more likely to judge an Indigenous person as more aggressive when exposed to an image of an Indigenous-themed mascot logo (e.g., Fighting Sioux, Indians, Redskins; see Figure 2 for illustrations of these logos). This same effect did not occur when participants were exposed to an image of a White mascot logo (e.g., Fighting Irish, Vikings, Pirates) or a neutral image (e.g., carrot, cupcake, hamburger). Additionally, this effect was not observed when participants were asked to judge the behavior of a non-Indigenous person engaging in the same behavior as an Indigenous person. As a result, the presence of Indigenous-themed mascot logos facilitates the stereotype application process by which people selectively make negative and harmful evaluations of Indigenous people, particularly when they hold pre-existing prejudicial attitudes. Taken together, the results of these empirical investigations indicate that Indigenous-themed sports mascots logos and nicknames can not only activate a stereotype generating process, it can also facilitate the process by which people selectively apply pejorative judgments based on these stereotypes to Indigenous people, a process that creates a racially hostile environment and threatens their psychological functioning.

Creating a Racially Hostile Environment

In conjunction with the psychological research of my colleagues on this issue, the results of empirical research studies that I have conducted and published in scientific peer-reviewed journals (e.g., Steinfeldt, Foltz, Kaladow, Carlson, Pagano, Benson, & Steinfeldt, 2010; Steinfeldt, Foltz, LaFollette, White, Wong, & Steinfeldt, 2012; Steinfeldt & Wong, 2010) indicate that the presence of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos not only perpetuates stereotypes, but its presence can also create a racially hostile environment that can threaten the psychological well-being of Indigenous people. This research attempts to identify domains wherein the racially hostile environments exist (e.g., online), while also attempting to provide explanatory theoretical frameworks to conceptualize the dynamics of racism and invalidation that flourish within these contexts.

In one study, Steinfeldt and Wong (2010) examined the relationship between color-blind racial attitudes and the awareness of Indigenous-themed mascot nicknames among a group of counseling graduate students. Similar to the later work of Neville, Yeung, Todd, Spanierman, and Reed (2011), this study attempted to link the rationale of mainstream society for maintaining racialized mascots to the beliefs underlying colorblind racial attitudes (Neville, Lilly, Duran, Lee, & Browne, 2000). Conceptualized as the denial, distortion, or minimization of race and racism (Neville, Spanierman, & Doan, 2006), the adoption of colorblind racial attitudes among White Americans reflects an attempt to reduce the dissonance associated with a sincere desire to believe in racial equality (Neville, Worthington, & Spanierman, 2001). While this contemporary ideology appears egalitarian on the surface, colorblindness ignores the role of power in society, it invalidates the experiences with racism that racial/ethnic minority group members endure, and it serves to maintain the societal status quo wherein members of racial/ethnic minority groups have inequitable access to societal resources. To this point, research has established significant relationships between colorblindness and a wide range of social attitude indexes, including negative attitudes toward affirmative action (Awad, Cokley, & Ratvich, 2005), increased racial prejudice (Neville et al., 2000), and lower multicultural counseling competencies (Neville et al., 2006).

The results of Steinfeldt and Wong's (2010) study demonstrated that awareness of the offensiveness of Indigenous-themed mascot nicknames was significantly inversely related to color-blind racial attitudes. That is, the more a person indicated that Indigenous-themed mascot nicknames were problematic, the less likely (s)he was to endorse color-blind racial ideologies. Individuals with color-blind racial attitudes endorse the belief that "race should not and does not matter" (Neville et al., 2000, p. 60), and supporters of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos suggest that tradition and honor—and not race—are the primary reasons for supporting this practice (King et al., 2002; Russel, 2003; Staurowsky, 2007). Thus, both colorblindness and supporting Indigenous-themed mascots nicknames serve to minimize the role of racism in society, a dynamic that can threaten the psychological functioning of members of racial minority groups. Furthermore, the authors asserted that the belief that Indigenous-themed mascots honor Indigenous people may serve as an ego defense that helps preserve an individual's sense of egalitarianism, while simultaneously masking the destructive and genocidal acts of White Americans toward Indigenous communities, both in past and contemporary times (Grounds, 2001). In short, the use of Indigenous-themed mascot nicknames can invalidate the reality of Indigenous people, while giving White Americans the perception of a false sense of unity with Indigenous people (Black, 2002). Steinfeldt and Wong (2010) concluded that colorblind racial attitudes may serve as the glue that binds this false union, serving to facilitate resentment, disempowerment, and subjugation among Indigenous people who are exposed to a racially hostile environment.

Another study (Steinfeldt et al., 2010) analyzed 1699 online forum comments that appeared in newspapers in a community with a college team with an Indigenous-themed mascot nickname and logo. These comments were coded over a two-year period, and results indicated that the majority of these comments expressed negative attitudes toward Indigenous people. These online forum comments were categorically organized within themes of: (a) surprise about how the nickname/logo could be construed as negative; (b) power and privilege exerted in defending the nickname/logo; (c) trivialization of issues salient to Indigenous people; and (d) denigration and vilification of Indigenous communities. The results indicated that Indigenous people were subjected to not only continued societal ignorance and misinformation about their culture, but they are also being actively excluded from the process of prioritizing which issues needed to be addressed. Results also indicated that a critical mass of online forum comments represented ignorance about Indigenous culture and even disdain toward Indigenous people by providing misinformation, by perpetuating stereotypes, and by expressing explicitly racist attitudes toward Indigenous people. While some online forum comments examined in the study did contain the words honor and respect, the results indicated that the sentiment underlying and surrounding these comments did not reflect a genuine sense of honor or respect—instead, these comments expressed sentiments of entitlement, privilege, power, and even subjugation and oppression.

The findings of this study were interpreted within the tenets of Two-Faced Racism (Picca & Feagin, 2007), an established theoretical model for conceptualizing dynamics of contemporary racism. According to this framework, boundaries for the expression of racial attitudes exist within shifting social contexts. Subsequently, racial ideologies—particularly those about members outside of the dominant culture (e.g., Indigenous people)—exist, but the expression of these ideologies take place in private (i.e., backstage) settings rather than public (i.e., frontstage) settings. Because public opinion has shifted to condemn blatant racist attitudes and behaviors in public settings (Picca & Feagin, 2007), explicit expressions of racist attitudes have begun to find a home in electronic communication formats (Bargh & McKenna, 2004; Melican & Dixon, 2008). As it relates to the findings of the Steinfeldt et al. (2010) study, the relative anonymity afforded to online forum participants provided the privacy experienced in traditional backstage settings. Results suggested that expressing these ideas in contemporary backstage settings (e.g., weblogs, online forums) allowed people to avoid the scrutiny and negative social consequences that these attitudes might otherwise receive in physical frontstage settings. For example, an online forum commenter might more readily call an Indigenous person a derogatory name in an online forum comment, but it is likely that (s)he might not say the same thing aloud at a social gathering, for fear of social repercussions. Subsequently, due to the omnipresence and power of the internet, the presence of an Indigenous-themed nickname and logo can facilitate the posting of virulent racist rhetoric in online forums. And because these types of racist messages are able to electronically spread out with greater ease to a larger audience, the daily ritual of reading the newspaper can subject an Indigenous person to content that can negatively impact his/her psychological well-being. The results of this study suggests that Indigenous-themed nicknames and logos can create a racially hostile environment wherein stereotypes are allowed to flourish. In conclusion, the presence of an Indigenous-themed nickname and logo can threaten the psychological functioning of Indigenous people by providing misinformation, by activating stereotypic representations, and by facilitating the expression of explicitly racist attitudes toward Indigenous people.

In assessing the impact of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos as it relates to stereotyping and creating a racially hostile environment, it is useful to examine how these images are used in the contexts in which they exist. Sports generate passionate responses from participants and fans, and rivalries generate heightened levels of passion. A few days ago, a headline about a story appeared online that illustrates this dynamic (Springer, 2016). The story describes how Dr. Dean Bresciani, President of the North Dakota State University Bison, wrote a letter in the NDSU campus newspaper asking his students to stop using "hateful" chants in football games against their rival, the University of North Dakota Fighting Hawks. UND had previously been the Fighting Sioux, but in 2012 they begrudgingly retired their Indigenous-based team nickname after fighting the NCAA's 2005 mandate to remove their Indigenous-themed nickname and logo. Despite the change, Bison fans still routinely chant "Sioux Suck (expletive)!" when their Bison team makes a first down in the football game against the Fighting Hawks. Figure 3 shows additional ways that fans have taken to demeaning and dehumanizing uses of the Indigenous-themed mascot logo and nickname (e.g., T-shirts of a slovenly-looking Indigenous person sodomizing a Bison; T-shirts with an image of a severed head of a headdress wearing Indigenous "chief" drinking a beer bong underneath the phonetically altered Indigenousthemed nickname [and specific Tribal name] used as an adjective to describe inebriation [Siouxper Drunk]; T-shirts with a caricatured Indigenous person fellating a Bison; fans cheering and engaging Indigenous people in Red-face, an image that conjured comparisons to the racist practice of wearing Black-face). Being exposed to this use of Indigenous-themed sports nicknames and logos as a means to ridicule, mock, and dehumanize Indigenous people has a profoundly negative impact on their psychological functioning.

This phenomenon of harmful appropriation of imagery in sporting events at the expense of the psychological functioning of First-Nations individuals is widespread. The image in Figure 2 of cheerleaders holding a banner for a high school football game represents a common practice where the opponents of an Indigenous-themed team find creative ways to demean their opponent. However, using race-based mascots, nicknames, or logos creates the opportunity for a marginalized group to be exposed to a racially hostile environment that can negatively impact their psychological functioning. In this particular example depicted in Figure 3 that occurred prior to a high school football game in Ohio in 2016, the cheerleaders for the McLain Tigers created a banner for their football players to run through prior to their game against the Hillsboro Indians. The banner reads, "Hey Indians, Get Ready for a Trail of Tears Part 2", which was intended to convey the message that their football team was going to be sad by the impending defeat in the game. However, the reference to the Trail of Tears represents an objectively horrific act of government-enacted genocide, a black mark on the history of the United States. The use of this reference trivializes this traumatic event and exposes Indigenous people to potential psychological harm. While the school (i.e., Hillsboro) can assert that they institute policies that attempt to prevent their students from misusing their Indigenous-themed nickname, they cannot fully control the ways that opponents and others may choose to use that Indigenous-themed nickname, logo, or mascot, quite often in a negative manner and at the expense of Indigenous populations.

Furthermore, the impact of Indigenous-themed sports mascots, nicknames, and logos extends beyond sporting events. In an empirical study that appeared in a scientific peer-reviewed journal, Steinfeldt, Foltz, LaFollette, White, Wong, and Steinfeldt (2012) analyzed qualitative data obtained from social justice activists who advocated for the removal of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos. These people described harrowing situations where they were threatened, harassed, physically assaulted, and had their property vandalized as a result of proposing to change the Indigenous-themed sports nickname and logo in their community. The stories of the advocates illustrated the points highlighted in the Steinfeldt et al. (2010) study on online forums by demonstrating the potential for physical and psychological harm that exists in a racially hostile environment that can be created by the presence of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos in sport.

Impacting Psychological Functioning

In addition to scientific research highlighting the impact of stereotypes and racially hostile environments, an emerging body of psychological research findings have demonstrated the direct psychological ramifications of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos. Fryberg et al. (2008) published a manuscript that addressed the four empirical studies they conducted that examined the impact of these Indigenous-themed mascot nicknames and logos on the psychological well-being of both Indigenous and White American participants. In their study, Indigenous high school and college students who were exposed to images of Indigenous-themed mascot logos reported significantly fewer achievement related possible selves, along with lower levels of self-esteem and community worth when compared to members of the control group who were not exposed to such images. So seeing these stereotypic representations (e.g., noble savage; the caricatured image of Chief Wahoo) can make Indigenous people feel worse about themselves and it can facilitate the internalization of negative views about their own community. Additionally, the presence of these images can contribute to Indigenous people reducing the number of future-related goals they have for themselves, thereby internalizing the narrow and prejudicial view society has of them. Doing so limits the possibilities they see for themselves. Across all of these findings, the authors concluded that these Indigenous-themed images effectively threaten the psychological functioning of Indigenous people in a variety of different ways (Fryberg et al., 2008).

In another peer-reviewed study that was also published in the scientific literature, LaRocque, McDonald, Weatherly, and Ferraro (2011) also attempted to empirically assess the direct psychological impact that Indigenous-themed sports images had on Indigenous people. The authors investigated the impact of two categories of on both White participants and Indigenous participants, with experimental and control groups for each racial group. The first category of images was referred to as neutral, based on societal expectations that these images are omnipresent and readily visible (e.g., team logos that are present on uniforms, shirts, and other areas on campus and beyond; Examples can be found in Table 2). The other category of images was referred to as controversial in that they represented images and logos that depicted caricatured or demeaning images of Indigenous people and misuse of tribal names (e.g., Siouxvenirs, caricatured images of Indigenous-themed logos; Examples can be found in Table 2).

Results indicated that Indigenous participants reported significantly higher levels of psychological distress and negative affect, compared to their baseline scores, after viewing both sets of images, when compared to the control group and to the group of White participants. When compared to their own control group, White participants did report higher levels of negative affect above their baseline scores, but only after viewing the controversial images, and they reported no significant differences on neutral images. The result that the Indigenous participants reported higher psychological distress and more negative affect on the neutral images contributed to the authors determining that the term neutral was not actually applicable to these images because these "neutral" images negatively impacted the psychological functioning of Indigenous people, as demonstrated in this study and in other studies in the psychological literature. Subsequently, Indigenous students can be negatively impacted by simply walking around campus and seeing the omnipresent "neutral" Indigenous-themed sport logo, a school-sanctioned image that appears on shirts, campus buildings, and elsewhere.

Conclusion

In this report, I have reviewed relevant empirical research in the scientific literature that addresses the psychological impact of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos in sport. This emerging body of research has produced results that indicate that this practice has a negative impact on the psychological functioning of Indigenous people in number of ways, both direct (e.g., lower self-esteem, higher levels of negative affect, higher psychological distress, less possible selves, lower community worth) and indirect (e.g., stereotype activation, stereotype application, creating a racially hostile environment; generating dehumanizing images of Indigenous people). Additionally, I included relevant theoretical frameworks from the psychological literature (e.g., Two-Faced Racism, Colorblind Racial Attitudes) to provide a context to help explain the results concerning racially hostile environments. While the majority of the research cited in this report has been conducted in the United States, I do not have any reason to believe that the impact would be drastically different in Canada. The Indigenousthemed mascot logos and nicknames used in the empirical research studies I reviewed in this report are similar--and in some cases even identical--to the logos and nicknames presented in the City of Mississauga complaint (see Figure 1 and Figure 2). Furthermore, the process by which people internalize stereotypes is similar in the United States and Canada (e.g., Schneider, 2003), so based on my best professional judgment, it is reasonable to assume that these Indigenousthemed images of stereotypic representations would have a comparable impact on the psychological functioning of Indigenous people in Canada.

Additionally, Indigenous people generally lack the social power and influence to effectively advocate for removal of these Indigenous-themed nicknames and logos. These images are firmly entrenched into the natural order of society (Davis-Delano, 2007), and members of the dominant culture are the most zealous defenders of this practice (Farnell, 2004). This ardent support, combined with the small population of Indigenous peoples (i.e., less than 2% of the U.S. population) and the lack of resources available to Indigenous communities (i.e., the rate of Indigenous people living below the poverty line is twice the rate found in the overall population; Merskin, 2001), help explain how Indigenous people in the United States have lacked the power that other minority groups have exerted in removing comparable racist stereotypes from the domain of social acceptability. Examples include the racist image of Frito Bandito as a stereotypic representation of Latinos and the racist image of Li'l Black Sambo as a stereotypic representation of African Americans (Steinfeldt, Hagen, & Steinfeldt, 2010; Westerman, 1989). Based on the Truth and Reconciliation Report (2015), a variety of parallels can be readily drawn between the experience of Indigenous populations in Canada and the experience of Indigenous populations in the United States. Subsequently, it is reasonable to assume that the same level of disenfranchisement, marginalization, and invalidation experienced by Indigenous people in both countries contributes to comparably low levels of social influence, which in turn contributes to the omnipresence and entrenchment of Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos in society. In the absence of empirical scientific evidence supporting the continuation of using Indigenous-themed mascots, nicknames, and logos in sport, the arguments of history and tradition remain the primary reasons given for maintaining a practice that has the potential to inflict psychological harm on a specific group of people (Steinfeldt et al., 2011). In sum, this is an issue that warrants serious consideration, and it is important that empirical evidence be included in the discussion so that a fully informed conversation can be had that includes the psychological impact of Indigenous-themed sport mascots, nicknames, and logos.

ready for mulching. The Splash Pad timer is now set at 4-minute intervals. We are not set up for

INSPECTIONS, AUDITS & REPORTS

 Several small fixes were needed from various mechanics. We also had an issue with a Kubota mower that will require a costly repair. A fuel tank punctured and needed replacement. There is also a walker mower that requires a replacement part. We are waiting to see if a warrantee part can be installed, as it is a major part and is about four weeks over warrantee! Hopefully we can have this fixed with the warrantee coverage.

VEHICLES

No issues with any fleet vehicles to report.

OTHER MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT & TOOLS

Hedge trimmers and chain saws were serviced and are ready for use again.

HEALTH & SAFETY

No issues to report. Concerns had been raised about access to items in the shed. Pipe racks were built, and many items have been moved around to address these concerns.

SECURITY

Nothing to report.

CAPITAL BUDGET

- The Christina St. reconstruction is well underway this week. The new curbs and basin repairs are done. The road will be closing for three weeks beginning the week of June 10th for paving.
- The Livingston St. curbs are now complete, and paving will be completed in accordance with Christina St. timeframes.
- I will be demonstrating a new sidewalk machine in the next couple of weeks. A trade show had exactly what I was looking for to try.
- Boulevard tree planting and removals have started.
- A new front mount deck Kubota mower is now in our fleet.
- New banner arms were installed downtown.
- The greaser for the dump truck has been installed.
- The native garden at Splash Pad has been completed.

COMMUNITY FEEDBACK

No issues to report.

LOOKING AHEAD

- Jim will be arranging a formal photo op, at the request of the Moose Lodge, in recognition of the Jenn swing donation. The swing is ready and will be installed once this has taken place.
- Monk St. Park meeting set for Monday with the contractor, engineer, and the Village. All archeological assessments are complete, and we are awaiting a report. Progress should start very soon after Monday's meeting.
- A public meeting was held Tuesday, June 4th regarding road diet and 4-way stop, with feedback to follow. The County of Lambton painted line road diet came across very positively. We will be discussing the 4-way stop signs at Council.
- I have ordered "ALL WAY" stop signs for Charles, Helena, and Albert St.

CLOSING COMMENTS

- We are quite busy around the shop and the Village so far this Spring. The weather has not been ideal, but everyone here is keeping up with the grass and trimming as much as possible.
- The students have fit in nicely so far and have been very reliable. They are still receiving coaching on some things, but they have done a great job so far.
- I thank all the Councillors and the Mayor for their texts and emails regarding items they have seen around town. We hear from them regularly and this is helpful.

For any other items that come up, please feel free to call me!
